🔊 Nora went to a Mexican festival with Alma and her family. It was a big party with lots of people, food, and music. Many people were waving flags.

🔊 "The flags are red, green, and white. Those are the colors of Mexico," said Alma.

🔊 "The flags are pretty!" said Nora.

🔊 "This isn't even the best part," said Alma. "Just wait!"

Alma's mother got plates of food for everyone.

"I have never tried Mexican food before," said Nora.

"Put some salsa on your taco," said Alma. "The salsa tastes spicy."

🔊 "Yum!" said Nora. "The food must be the best part of the festival."

🔊 "It's yummy, but it's not the best part," said Alma. "Just wait!"

🔊 “This festival has great music,” said Alma’s father. “Let’s go listen to the band.”

🔊 He led the way to the stage.

🔊 Nora saw men wearing big hats.

🔊 They were playing instruments and singing.

🔊 "I like this music," Nora said.
"It sounds happy. The music must be the best part of the festival!"

🔊 "The music is great, but it's not the best part of the festival," said Alma. "Just wait!"

🔊 Then a group of dancers came onto the stage. They were wearing colorful clothes and clapping.

🔊 “That looks like fun!” Nora said. “The dancers must be the best part of the festival!”

🔊 "They are great dancers," agreed Alma. "But they're not the best part of the festival."

🔊 "What could be better than the dancers?" asked Nora.

🔊 "Just wait. You'll see!"
said Alma.

🔊 At the end, everyone cheered for Mexico. Then they all began to dance... even Nora and Alma!

🔊 "This is the best part!" Alma said. "Dancing together!"

🔊 "You're right!" said Nora. "I think this is the best part, too!"
